

August 2026

Dear Steven,

I've worked in the Lamorinda and Diablo Valley markets long enough to know that end-unit townhomes on a quiet cul-de-sac with direct trail access to Acalanes Ridge Open Space don't come along very often, and 1827 Lamplight Court caught my attention the moment it hit the market. The combination of soaring ceilings, walls of windows, and those filtered hill views in a Beacon Ridge floor plan this size is genuinely rare. When the listing came off market at 47 days without a sale, I wanted to understand why, because nothing about the home itself explains that outcome.

Forty-seven days is close to the line where buyer psychology starts to shift. When a thoughtfully maintained, turnkey property with a recently rebuilt balcony, a freshly repainted interior, and immediate access to the East Bay Regional Park trail system doesn't close inside of five weeks, the answer is almost always in the strategy, not the home. The marketing didn't fully connect the lifestyle this property offers with the buyers who would pay a premium for it, and the $9,730 monthly HOA, which is the most significant financial fact in this listing, was never given the narrative it needed to make buyers see it as a membership in something rather than a line item on a spreadsheet.

I've put together a short packet for you that walks through the specific friction points I see in the listing history, where I think the distribution fell short, and how I'd approach a relaunch differently, starting with the story the property deserves to tell.

If you're already working with a real estate agent toward a new listing, please feel free to set this aside. If you're not, I'd welcome a conversation whenever it suits you. No pressure either way.

With respect,

Ben Olsen

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

A Light-Filled Hilltop End Unit with Rare Trail Access - and a Listing That Undersold Both

1827 Lamplight Court brings together a set of features that Walnut Creek buyers at this price point genuinely seek out: one of the largest floor plans in Beacon Ridge, vaulted ceilings with walls of windows, direct frontage on the Acalanes Ridge Open Space trail network, and a turnkey interior that was freshly repainted in January 2026 with an updated kitchen and a rebuilt private balcony. For the right buyer, this is a move-in-ready home with an outdoor lifestyle built into the address itself.

The listing history, 47 days without an accepted offer, doesn't reflect anything wrong with the property. It reflects a strategy gap. The $9,730 monthly HOA was the single most consequential number in this listing, and it required a clear, confident narrative about what it covers and what it buys. Without that, price-sensitive buyers experienced the fee as a cost to be avoided rather than a membership in a well-managed community. Separately, the listing description relied on all-caps fragments to flag key features rather than telling the cohesive story that would move a qualified buyer from online browsing to a scheduled showing.

A relaunch needs to accomplish two specific things for this property: it needs to reframe the HOA as an asset and explain its value in concrete terms, and it needs to build a visual and narrative presentation that puts the trail access, the hill views, and the hilltop setting front and center before a buyer ever schedules a showing.

MARKET FORENSICS: WHY IT DIDN'T SELL

Every expired listing has a story. Here's what the listing history tells us about what held this one back, and what a different strategy would have done.

Friction #1: The $9,730 HOA Was Listed, Not Sold

At $9,730 per month, the HOA is the first number a buyer's calculator reaches for, and if the marketing doesn't answer that question before the buyer asks it, the listing loses the conversation before it starts. The listing described the home's interior beautifully in places but never explained what those dues actually provide: professional management, exterior maintenance, reserves, insurance, amenities, or community infrastructure. Buyers don't dismiss a high HOA when they understand what it covers and how it simplifies ownership. They dismiss it when they're left to guess. The monthly figure needed a narrative built around it, not a footnote.

* THE BRIGHTWORK DIFFERENCE

BrightWork's listing strategy for HOA communities leads with a lifestyle-first narrative that itemizes what the dues buy in plain language, so buyers experience the fee as a value equation before they ever run their own numbers.

Friction #2: All-Caps Fragments in a $1.289M Listing

The listing description contains several passages written in all caps, including the school district callout and the upstairs bedroom summary. In a price range where buyers are reading carefully and comparing multiple options, that formatting signals a form submission rather than a property worth $1,289,000. The home has a genuinely compelling story: end-unit position, direct trail access to the East Bay Regional Park system, soaring ceilings, a rebuilt balcony, Acalanes Ridge views. That story never fully landed because the description shifted between strong prose and shouted fragments, and buyers at this price point notice the difference. The home deserved writing that matched its quality.

* THE BRIGHTWORK DIFFERENCE

BrightWork's listing remarks are written the way a great buyer's agent describes a home to a serious client, with Zillow Showcase placement to make sure that narrative reaches the buyers who are reading closely before they schedule anything.

Friction #3: The Trail Access and Setting Were Never the Headline

Direct access to Acalanes Ridge Open Space, connecting to the East Bay Regional Park trail system, is a feature that a specific and motivated buyer segment will pay a meaningful premium for. Dog owners, hikers, cyclists, and buyers relocating from San Francisco who want that outdoor lifestyle baked into their address, not just nearby, are a real and active part of the Walnut Creek buyer pool. The listing mentioned trails in passing near the end of the description. For the buyer who places the highest value on this feature, it should have been the first thing they saw, not the last. A hilltop end-unit townhome with immediate open space access is a rare combination, and the photography and placement never made that case.

* THE BRIGHTWORK DIFFERENCE

BrightWork's Sky Tour puts the lot position, the open space frontage, and the hilltop setting into aerial context that ground photography simply cannot replicate, giving the right buyer a reason to schedule a showing before they've even looked at the floor plan.

POSITIONING ANALYSIS

Metric	1827 Lamplight Ct.	Walnut Creek Market Context
Price per Sq. Ft.	$551/sqft	Standard updated: $650–$730/sqft
Lot / Setting	2,296 sqft lot, end-unit, hilltop cul-de-sac, open space frontage	Typical attached/townhome: minimal private lot, standard street position
Architectural Character	One of largest Beacon Ridge floor plans, 2,341 sqft, soaring ceilings, walls of windows	Standard townhome volume, mid-range ceiling heights
Premium Features	Rebuilt balcony, updated kitchen with skylights, fireplace, wet bar, repainted Jan. 2026	Standard builder finishes, single living area
HOA	$9,730/mo	Walnut Creek townhome range: $400–$900/mo typical

The verdict: At $551/sqft versus a benchmark range of $650-$730/sqft, this home sits near the lower end of that range. At $551 per square foot, 1827 Lamplight Court is priced below the low end of the standard updated Walnut Creek range, which means the value case for a buyer was already present in the numbers. The challenge was never price. It was that the HOA, at $9,730 per month, required an explicit and compelling explanation of what it provides, and the marketing didn't deliver that. A relaunch that pairs a confident HOA narrative with strong visual coverage of the open space setting gives this home a clear path to the right buyer.

THE RELAUNCH STRATEGY: 3 PILLARS

We don't re-list this home. We relaunch it with new media, a narrative that finally does it justice, and distribution designed for the buyer it deserves.

Pillar I - Reframe the HOA as a Membership, Not a Surcharge

The $9,730 monthly HOA is the first number a buyer's agent flags and the first objection an unrepresented buyer raises. The only way to neutralize it is to answer it before it becomes a reason to pass. That means building a clear, plain-language breakdown of what the dues cover and leading with it in every marketing channel. When buyers understand what they're buying, the fee becomes part of the value story, not an obstacle to it. BrightWork's listing campaigns treat HOA framing as a core messaging task, not an afterthought.

Pillar II - Put the Trail Access and Setting in the Opening Frame

The Acalanes Ridge Open Space connection is a feature that a defined and motivated buyer segment will actively seek out and pay for. That buyer is shopping online before they ever contact an agent, and they need to see the open space frontage and hilltop position in the first few images or they'll keep scrolling. A Sky Tour that captures the lot position relative to the ridgeline and the trail access point gives that buyer the visual confirmation they're looking for. That showing gets scheduled. The one where the trail access is mentioned in the fifth paragraph does not.

Pillar III - Match the Writing Quality to the Property Quality

A 2,341-square-foot end-unit with rebuilt balcony, vaulted ceilings, and direct trail access to the East Bay Regional Park system deserves a listing description that reads like it. The previous listing had real assets to work with, but the all-caps fragments and generic phrasing in the closing lines undercut the credibility of everything that came before it. BrightWork's Zillow Showcase listings are written as a complete narrative, so the buyer who is reading carefully, the buyer who is actually deciding, finishes the description with more confidence, not less.

A DIFFERENT OPTION: THE QUIET LISTING

Sell Without the Disruption

A traditional listing puts a sign in your yard, opens your door to strangers every weekend, and puts your home's history on public record. For a home that already went through one listing cycle, there's a better starting point.

BrightWork maintains an active private buyer list through our off-market platform. These are Bay Area buyers who've opted in specifically to receive property alerts before anything hits Zillow. They're motivated, pre-qualified, and they believe an off-market home represents a real opportunity, which means they engage seriously.

- * No public days on market. The prior listing history stays private. A new buyer sees none of it.
- * No sign, no open houses, no disruption. The sale is a private conversation between a motivated buyer and a motivated seller.
- * Option to go public anytime. If the right off-market offer doesn't materialize in an agreed window, we transition directly into a full relaunch strategy with no time lost.

* HOW IT WORKS

We alert our private buyer list through offmarket.brightworkrealty.com - Bay Area buyers specifically seeking properties before they go public. If a serious match emerges within the agreed window, we negotiate and close privately. If not, we launch the full relaunch strategy immediately, with clean momentum and no days-on-market exposure.

TIMELINE: THE BRIGHTWORK SMART WAY

Phase 1 - Pre-Market Preparation (Weeks 1–2)

Staging, full media production, and a Coming Soon campaign - or a quiet listing launch to our private buyer network, depending on your preference.

Phase 2 - Strategic Launch (Week 3)

Thursday launch on Zillow Showcase with the full media package in premium placement. Targeted SF/Oakland digital ads go live the same day.

Phase 3 - Momentum Management (Weeks 4–5)

Active follow-up on every save, inquiry, and open house visitor. Final Offer gives serious buyers a transparent channel to submit competitive offers.

Phase 4 - The Close (Weeks 6–7)

We engineer competition, not just field offers. Our process keeps both sides of the transaction moving cleanly toward a close.

WHY BRIGHTWORK REALTY ADVOCATES

- * Deep local roots: 45+ years in Moraga, Lafayette, and Orinda. Ground-level knowledge of what buyers in each community are actually paying for.
- * Premium marketing as a baseline: Cinematic photography, floor plans, 3D tours, and Sky Tours on every listing. Not a luxury add-on.
- * Portal dominance: Zillow Showcase and homes.com premium placement. More views, enhanced listing pages, all leads to your team.
- * Modern offer tools: Final Offer gives buyers a transparent path to engage and gives you real-time demand data in one place.
- * True advocacy: We don't re-list homes. We forensically review what went wrong and rebuild the strategy from the ground up.

This home has real assets that the market never got to properly evaluate. That's a correctable problem. The window to correct it is still open.
